GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY HELD AT OCEAN BEACH

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Gilbert of 4963 Santa Monica avenue, entertained at a 6 o'clock dinner Monday, July 2nd to celebrate the golden wedding anniversary of Mrs. Gilbert's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Robinson. Mr. and Mrs. Robinson were married in Paris, Canada, living there for four years before removing to Chicago. In 1905 they moved to Seattle, living in Bryn Mawr, a suburb, until they came to Ocean Beach three years ago to be near their daughter, Mrs. Gilbert, and her family.

Two daughters, Mrs. George Putt of Kalamazoo, Mich., and Mrs. Charles MacDonald of Chicago, and a son, C. J. of Bremerton, Wash., were unable to be here for the anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert invited Mr. Robinson's brother, Charles E. and wife of Glendale, and Mrs. Wilson of East San Diego, a former neighbor in Bryn Mawr, to help in the celebration.

Mr. and Mrs. Robinson are very active and interested in affairs of the day.

Mr. and Mrs. Robinson and his brother, C. E. and wife, returned Sunday from a very enjoyable two weeks' camping trip to Yosemite. Mr. and Mrs. Robinson walked eight miles on one of the trails one day.

At the joyful celebration of Mr. and Mrs. Robinson's fifty years of wedded bliss, there was a great profusion of flowers and numerous presents from friends and relatives. The table decorations were in lavender and to top it all a bride's cake and a groom's cake were cut and thoroughly enjoyed.

The happy young-old couple are in general good health and are great favorites in a wide circle of friends. The Beach News staff extends them heartiest congratulations.

GIRLS AND BOYS VACATION SCHOOL AT OCEAN BEACH

All boys and girls of Ocean Beach not over 12 years of age are invited to attend the Vacation Bible school which begins next Monday, July 9, at 9 o'clock. The school will be held in the Sunday school rooms of the new Baptist church on Defoe street at the corner of Santa Monica avenue. The school will be held in the forenoons only for a period of four weeks.

A varied program of instruction and activities will be provided. And all will be free of charge, a gift to the community. Mr. Everett Dickson has been secured to serve as Superintendent of the school and he will be assisted by a number of competent teachers and supervisors.

There will be departments for beginners, primary and junior pupils, and the courses will be adapted to the different ages.

Stories, games, songs, drills, handwork, health and habit talks, first aid talks and exercises, Bible memorizing, making maps of Bible lands and other activities will afford something interesting and worth while for all.

HEALTH BOARD HALTS WORK ON COMFORT STATIONS

Efforts of Fred Rhodes, city manager of operations, to establish temporary comfort stations at Mission Beach to accommodate the Fourth of July crowds were halted early this week by the city health board, which entered objections to anything of a temporary character, or that would be in violation of the municipal ordinances. The council had appropriated $300 for the work, at the request of Mission Beach residents.

CITY MANAGER TO CONSIDER REQUEST FOR NEW WATER MAIN

At the regular meeting of the U. B. Chamber of Commerce last Monday night a special committee was appointed to confer with City Manager Fred Rhodes regarding a water main on Defoe street from the bay to Sunset Cliffs.

A vote of thanks was extended the board of education for recent large appropriations for school purposes at Ocean Beach, and special appreciation was accorded to Mrs. Lena P. Crouse and Edgar F. Hastings, members of the school board, who were in attendance, for their loyalty and efforts in behalf of the interests of the beach, bay and peninsula districts.

Peerless Performance

"A Midsummer Night's Dream"

Under Guiding Genius of Mme. Katherine Tingley

By GRACE THORNTON.

One lives to learn in Southern California, but among the various surprises that await the Easterner in this new Western Italy of ours, those to be met with on the occasion of a play presented by Katherine Tingley and her students in the Greek Theater at the International Theosophical headquarters, Point Loma, are not only unique but most delightful. I had heard of this big open-air theater, and I was prepared for something a bit unusual when I motored over on Wednesday evening July 4, to see "A Midsummer Night's Dream." But I was wholly unprepared for what I saw. There is an indefinable something about this wonderful center of International culture and effort for the betterment of humankind that I felt and feel still, though I cannot describe it, and the work-a-day, cash-down world appears to be so totally shut out, that I find it quite impossible to write about the play itself in anything like the ordinary way. From the moment I entered the gate, and went on up the hill, past beautiful rose-beds and semi-tropical gardens, with the lighted domes of the Temple of Peace and the Raja-Yoga Academy rising up a little further on in the midst of dense shrubbery, to the School of Antiquity hill, with a light set up on the very top of its high flag-pole, I felt as though I were in another and finer world. When seated in the richly lighted theater itself, the illusion was complete.

This beautiful open-air Greek theater is said to be the first of its kind in America having been built by Katherine Tingley in 1901. Outside of that one gemlike but not ruined theater in Fiesole, which has no rival for sheer beauty even in Greece itself, I have never seen its equal. It is concealed by masses of shrubbery and young trees, in which the artistically arranged lights shine out like suspended jewels; and when one comes upon it set in a sheltered canyon, the surprise is as complete as though night had lifted a veil upon a new world of wonder.

In the center of the tessellated stage or arena, is a high white-columned temple of Doric design, similar to the stoa in which Plato, Zeno and other great Athenians studied and taught. On either side and at the rear is another tangle of shrubbery and trees, which edge the serrated canyon that winds down to the sea, half a mile or so, apparently, to the West. Whichever way one looks, it is impossible to find a jarring note or the trivial modern touch. And as the scene of the play is laid in Athens and the "palace wood" hard by, such a setting serves ideally.

The effect of it was rendered little less than magical by the sense of freedom felt in the open air. Instead of painted stars on worn-our theatrical canvas, there were whole constellations dotting nature's proscenium arch and dome, with the great Pacific stretching for miles away in the background. The opening scenes, too, were as purely Athenian as one could wish. The games of the children which Katherine Tingley introduced before the first scene in order to create the proper "atmosphere" for the marriage festival of Duke Theseus and his Amazon queen, were so wholly, wonderfully Greek; and yet this phase of Greek life has so far been overlooked by the few producers who have done anything with Greek drama.

The cast was made up of students of the Theosophical University, of which Katherine Tingley, the genius of this marvelous presentation, is the president. The fairy parts were taken by the Raja-Yoga tots, jupils of the school, which she founded in 1900. All the players have been trained personally in dramatic art by the Foundres-Directress of the school, Katherine Tingley, who maintains:

"The drama, like music, is regarded by the world as merely one of the relaxations of life. True drama points away from the unrealities to the real life of the soul. As such the drama should lead and guide the public taste, providing it with ideals towards which it can aspire.

"Nowhere in the social life of the day is the need for reform more manifest than in the drama. In too many directions it has been made to serve the sensationalism and sensualism of the day, and to stimulate the vicious propensities which it might be so wonderful to suppress.

"The facilities for dramatic work at the International Theosophical headquarters at Point Loma are unsurpassed anywhere in the world. We are within sight of the day which will once more restore the drama to its rightful position as one of the great redemptive forces of the age."

I have sat before the genius of Bayreuth, and although fascinated by its intellectualism and its art, I have repelled by its atmosphere of commercialism; I have seen the Stratford Players in their own Memorial Theater on the banks of Avon, where art is the final word and stars are lost in the constellation. At the World's Exposition held in Chicago I saw the most elaborate open-air production of the "Dream" ever given in America under the Great willows in the magnificient French court at Midsummer—but in the humble opinion of a traveler with whom Shakespeare is a hobby and who believes that the Master-mind has not yet been fully interpreted, these Raja-Yoga Players show a finesse and a quality of undertaking that is something new in dramatic art. Technically their work is above criticism, and San Diegans should be proud to have such a valuable cultural asset so near at hand. And yet quite beyond mere technique or culture—there is an indefinable touch about the work of these Theosophical students and their teacher, that is essentially spiritual in its effect.

I wish the Bard himself could have seen Wednesday night's production, and renewed acquaintance, across three centuries and more, with this enchanting child of his fancy. There was a scholarly tone throughout, yet with fantasy, spontaneity and charm alive and glowing, as it might glow in fairyland itself. Katherine Tingley presents the play, too, as Shakespeare wrote it—one unbroken whole, without the arbitrary cutting up into acts and scenes for which kindly editors who came much later, are to be thanked! It was given as in Elizabethan days, and right in a piece of Athens, out of doors!

One modern addition, however, we may be profoundly thankful for, and that is the incidental music, written by Mendelssohn at his best. The setting of the fairy-song, "I know a Bank Whereon the Wild Thyme Grows," was of special beauty. Upon inquiry I learned that this song was composed by a Raja-Yoga student, for Katherine Tingley's first presentation of this fairy masterpiece in 1908. The work of the orchestra could hardly be too highly praised, and the sympathetic rendering of the different motifs—the clown motif, the Puck motif, the duel motif, the entering march and the familiar "Wedding March" at the close, all so characteristic, so intimate to the meaning of the roles—it was refreshing to hear. Especially was this true of the recurrent motif in the fairy music, which was grossamer-like in its delicacy. No lovlier fairy music was ever written, I believe—which brings me back to the fairies, though to describe them is impossible. I am told they are flesh-and-blood children, but they were real fairies, and goblins and spirits, will-o'-the-wisps and pixies and fays, blown straight out of the world invisible into our own, with lovely Titania their queen who supported her part with such admirable delicacy and coyness, and Oberon their king, and merry, mischievous, irrepressible Puck. Some of the tinest of them all had speaking parts, and yet these were so delivered that even in that big theater not a syllable was lost. The acoustics of the theater are pronounced the finest in the world, and there was the delightfully clear, cultured, and perfect enunciation of Shakespeare's wonderful lines by those with speaking parts, all of which were distinguished by excellent reading and the highest of all art—true simplicity, earnestness, and naturalness—with not a touch of ranting anywhere.

The singing voices of these—fairies, or children, as you please!—were tuneful, rhythmic, and altogether lovely to hear. They frolicked and gamboled, tripped and danced, frisked and fluttered and sang, and might have flown away on their gauzy, butterfly wings at any moment for aught I saw to the contrary.

And as if to heighten the contrast, in and out of the fairy roles were woven those of the four lovers—splendid, highly dramatic presentations these, noteworthy on any stage—and those of Duke Theseus and his Amazon bride, finely interpreted and giving the whole play a framing of semi-royal splendor. The archaic dance of the Greek flower maidens at the wedding feast of the Duke and the Duchess was an exquisite exhibition of all that is refined, graceful, and lofty in the beautiful art of rhythmic-motion.

Most effective of all in some respects, were Bottom and his "rude mechanicals," who honor the Duke with their screaming farce of "Pyramus and Thisby" at the close. Dull-pated, well-meaning clowns! I have never seen anything funnier than their by-play, nor any part better carried off than that of Bottom the Weaver. Jocular, witty, over-reaching and egotistic, anxious to do everything and be everything in sight, playing the courtier to Titania with his whole mind fixed on hay and oats and the comfort of his hairy face—there is but one Bottom in literature and he is Shakespeare's own. The young actor who took the part is a rare comedian, and all of his colleagues handled these roles, which are so commonly overdone, with unusual skill, an art that worked a fine concealment of art.

As the fairies fluttered in to close the play, and the lights were lowered and the music hushed, while Puck swept out the last light cobweb with his tiny broom, I wondered—oh, I wondered—whether this is not the Reality, after all, and our frightened, money-mad, quarreling world, the Dream.

BIG HOLIDAY CROWDS ENJOYED THE FOURTH AT OCEAN BEACH

Parking space was at a premium near the ocean front on Independence day at Ocean Beach and at times the street cars ran double and triple headers, filled to capacity with holiday throngs. Fog clouds prevented the widely-heralded parachute drop, which was to have been the feature of the day, yet the crowd was afforded plenty of amusement otherwise. The merry-go-round and the dance pavilion divided honors in catering to seating capacity and beach parties were as thick as leaves in Vallambrosa. Jolly throngs jostled all afternoon along the board and the heart of the concessionaire was made glad, for the season was how on in full swing. Brilliant fireworks display in the evening formed a splendid finish to a fine day.

MANAGER SHAFFER ANNOUNCES LINE-UP O. B. BASEBALL CLUB

Under the expert guidance and wise management of L. A. Shaffer of the Maine Garage, a splendid local baseball club has been organized and with sufficient practice will very likely become a recognized factor in one of the Pacific coast leagues. The team played a special game recently with a nine from the Young Men's Institute, and despite a variety of handicaps the peppery O. B. bunch made excellent and most promising showing, the score being eleven to seven in favor of the visitors. However, the Y. M. I. outfit may well look to their laurels the next time they appear here.

Manager Shaffer announces that it is very probable an especially suitable diamond will be secured soon as permanent grounds for the home team.

Following is the present line-up of the Ocean Beach stars: Cliff Owens, c; W. Terry, p; Tex Bunning, 1b; Harry Holder (cap.) 2b; Guy Hawkins, 3b; Fireman Ryan, ss; L. A. Shaffer (man.) lf; E. Isson, cf; M. Holliday, rf.

"Pangini" Smith has been appointed official umpire, while the famous canine pet of the Maine Garage, "Rowdy," stands supreme as a bona fide mascot.

If arrangements can be satisfactorily provided, a special game will be scheduled for next Sunday afternoon.

NEED FOR UNIFORMITY IN BUSINESS LAWS

How Collection of Just Debts May Be Prevented by Differing State Statutes.

An effort to bring about better coordination and greater uniformity among state laws dealing with business and banking is being made by the American Bankers Association.

It is pointed out that, although the country is a unit commercially, and citizens of any one state may do business that reaches all over the country, most laws governing business transactions are made by the different states, with application limited to their own local jurisdictions and often in conflict with laws in other states. It is held that state laws should be uniform so that the same transaction will not be subject to different sets of rules according as state laws differ.

To illustrate the disadvantages of conflicting laws, the following illustration is given: Mr. Jones lives in New York where the statute of limitations outlaws a note in six years. He falls into the error of assuming that the same rule prevails everywhere. He visits Maryland and loans $1,000 to his friend, Mr. Smith, taking a promissory note. As the note carries interest Mr. Jones is in no hurry for his money and he believes Smith to be financially responsible. Finally at the end of four years Jones concludes he has loaned Smith the money long enough and seeks to collect the note from him. But Smith can deny liability and point to the statute of Maryland which Jones is surprised to learn outlaws a note after three years.

Changes Recommended

The particular subjects of legislation recommended by the association for enactment by State legislatures during 1923 include uniform acts on negotiable instruments, bills of lading, warehouse receipts, stock transfer, and fiduciaries.

Under the head of laws for better protection of banks in particular transactions are proposed measures dealing with limiting liability on certified check; instruments based on gambling or usurious consideration; time limit on stop payment; payment of stale check; adverse claim to bank deposit; payment of forged or raised check; deposits in two names; deposits in trust; competency of bank and corporation notaries; non-payment of check through error; Saturday afternoon bank transactions, and forwarding check direct to payor.

Under the Federal Reserve and foreign banking are recommended laws on membership of state institutions in Federal Reserve System, and foreign banking. Penal laws proposed deal with false statements for credit; slander and libel of bank; checks or drafts without funds, and burglary with explosives.

APPLE ICE CREAM IS LATEST

Synthetic Oil Has Been Prepared by Department of Agriculture for Flavoring.

A synthetic apple oil that possesses the aroma of ripe apples has been prepared by the bureau of chemistry of the United States Department of Agriculture, and a public service patent has been granted for the process.

This preparation has the merit of having no substance in it that does not occur naturally in the apple. In this it differs from other artificially prepared flavors labeled to indicate their resemblance in odor to certain fruits but whose components do not occur in the fruits they are supposed to represent. The water and beverage laboratory of the bureau has prepared a most palatable carbonated beverage with the apple oil as its base. The oil, being volatile, may not be used in the preparation of food products in which heat is a necessary factor, but is especially suitable for flavoring cold drinks and ice cream.

GOOD FISH CHOWDER RECIPE

Affords Pleasant Change From Meat Dinners in Winter and Is Palatable and Filling.

Besides being economical, a good hot fish chowder is filling and palatable in winter time and affords a pleasant change from meat dinners. The United States Department of Agriculture recommends the following recipe:

The backbones cut out of large fish with what meat adhered to them, the cleaned heads, and other fish scraps may be used for fish chowder.

Put over the fire in just enough cold water to cover and cook until the meat can easily be removed from the bones. Take up the fish and remove the bones, strain the fish soup, and return it with the picked fish meat to kettle. Add diced onions, diced potatoes, butter, and white pepper to taste. Simmer until the vegetables are done. Salt to taste.

ODE TO A TREE

By Joyce Kilmer

"I think that I shall never see
A poem lovely as a tree.
A tree whose hungry mouth is prest
Against the earth's sweet-flowing breast,
A tree that looks at God all day
And lifts her leafy arms to pray,
A tree that may in summer wear
A nest of robins in her hair,
Upon whose bosom snow has lain,
Who intimately lives with rain.
Poems are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a tree."

SOME OBSERVATIONS

Editor The Beach News:

Ocean Beach, Calif,

We read that the "powers that be "have granted Mr. Spreckels the fifty-year franchise for ALL the car lines, but we fail to see any conditions, such as a time limit, as to when a regular service shall be furnished to La Jolla, and way stations. It speaks of a "bus line" to Ocean Beach, to run not LESS than twenty minutes. That means that if in the next ten years Ocean Beach becomes a town of any size (it is near four thousand now) it cannot have a service of less than twenty minutes. Of course Mr. Spreckels would not let any other bus line operate.

Also

We read a city "ordinance" which says all owners of vacant lots SHALL clean them up so that they will not be a menace to others. There are some lots here that could be improved by fire and dump.

Also

We hear about a city ordinance requiring all sidewalks in Ocean Beach division, to be put in long ago. There are long stretches of it yet, without any walk laid, while others have been ordered in.

Also

We read that a contract has been signed for the building of four more rooms to our school house, at a cost of twenty-seven thousand and thirty-three dollars. Must be going to gold plate it.

AVERAGE AGE OF DINNER GUESTS EIGHTY-FIVE YEARS

Old friends enjoyed a very happy time at the dinner recently given by Dr. and Mrs. Henry G. Miller in honor of Dr. William C. Pond of San Francisco. Covers were laid for six, those present being William C. Pond, D. D. of San Francisco, E. S. Hill, D.D., and Mrs. Hill of National City, Miss Sara A. Hancock, of New York City, and Rev. Henry G. Miller, Ph. D., and Mrs. Miller. Some old fashioned "sums" performed after dinner, showed the aggregate age of the three men present as 255 years, and the average 85 years. Dr. Pond contributing 93 to the sum total, Dr. Hill 86 and Dr. Miller 76. Dr. Pond, who came to California in 1853, retired from the pastorate of the Bethany congregational church in San Francisco recently, but in spite of his 93 years is still active in oriental missionary work. Dr. Hill is pastor emeritus of the Congregational church at National City. Miss Hancock also claims distinction as a lineal descendant of John Hancock.

MISS RUTH RICHERT'S WEDDING.

One of the most interesting events last week was the wedding of Miss Ruth Richert and Mr. Fred Corey, formerly of Pacific Beach and now of La Jolla. It was solemnized Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock at St. James,-by-the-Sea, by Rev. John W. Millar and Rev. Bedford Jones. The church was beautifully decorated with gladioli, ferns and palms and was filled with relatives and friends of the bride and groom, three hundred invitations having been issued. Miss Ruth looked very sweet in a simple white dress of satin crepe, a bridal veil with orange blossoms and carrying a shower boquet of white roses. She was given away by her father. Little Geraldine Gilson and Ralph Burbridge were train bearers. Miss Mary Scripps was maid of honor. She was dressed in lavender chiffon and carried a boquet of lavender lace flowers. The bridesmaids kere Miss Bess Richert, who wore a pale green chiffon gown and carried a boquet of maiden hair fern, Miss Rosemary Bryant, who wore lemon yellow and carried sweet peas, and Miss Helen Smith in blue chiffon and carrying forget-me-nots. Mr. Gardiner Corey was best man, and Ralph and Roy Richert and Archie Logan ushers. A reception at the Richert home followed the ceremony, after which the bride and groom left by motor for Santa Barbara, where they are spending their honeymoon. They are expected back this week to La Jolla, where they will make their home.

CHURCH NEWS

Rev. John W. Millar's sermon Sunday morning was from the words of John the Baptist, "Behold the Lamb of God!" and was an invitation to abstain from the consideration of whether one liked the pastor, approved of the method of conducting the activities of the church, was in harmony with others in the work of the church, or any of the many other non-essentials, the main thing necessary being to look over all these, and above to the Lamb of God, holding His image in our hearts, and striving to believe in and serve Him with singleness of purpose.

The C. E. society met Sunday evening, the topic being the 44th Psalm, the history Phalm and the question suggested being, "Can we understand American history as well if we remember Columbus, Miles Standish, George Washington and Abraham Lincoln and forget God?"

COMMUNITY LEAGUE

The Community League met Monday evening. Various matters of civic interest were brought up. Among them, the over-head sign bearing the name Pacific Beach, which it had been decided to place on the boulevard. The site chosen was 100 feet east of the intersection of Garnet avenue and Cass street. It was also decided at some future time to also place the name in white on the hill side. It was reported that between $50 and $55 was cleared at the dance frolic and the social committee plans another as soon as feasible.

Mr. and Mrs. Fancher drove up to Jacumba Sunday to find a suitable place for spending the summer.

Capt. Davis made a trip to Los Angeles this week on business incidental to the opening of the summer session at the academy.

There was quite an epidemic of weddings last week. In addition to that of Ruth Richert and Fred Corey, our late school teacher, Miss Carolyn Mack was married Saturday at Santa Ana and the same day at La Jolla Ruth Mason married Dewey Estes. They left Sunday by auto for Mr. Floyd's orange ranch at Riverside, where they will reside.

Mrs. Barrett and granddaughter Miss Lenore left Monday for a two weeks' trip to Catalina and other places of interest.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarkson and family and Mrs. Moody and family left Saturday for Hemet where they expect to have an enjoyable and warm time picking apricots.

Mrs. Kentner is very much adding to the attractions of her home by transplanting the garage into a very cozy little bungalow.

Mr. Lindley left Tuesday for a business trip of several weeks' duration to San Francisco.

An S.O.S. call came to Dr. Adams a few days ago to go and exercise his trapping skill up Rose canyon, where some wildcats had been enjoying several chicken dinners. He has set some traps and we hope will be as successful as he was some months ago at Mr. Rozzellis place. It is well worth while for any one to go and see his collection of cured skins.

Pacific Beach seems to have a special attraction for members of the San Diego police force. Our collection of four was increased a few days ago when Mr. Slattery, wife and four children moved into the Davis house on the corner Lamont and Garnet.

The Pacific Beach Athletic club has been busy making various improvements down at the bay. They are planning for Sunday afternoon at 2:30 a swimming meet, when there will be various contests. Prizes will be given. All are cordially invited to come and take part or just "watch on," but any way view the improvements accomplished by this active club.

Mrs. George Coleman and baby, from Los Angeles are spending a few days with Mrs. Henry Churchman.

Mrs. George Brooks is entertaining a girl-hood friend, Mrs. C. O. O'Neil of Kalistell, Mont., who, with her husband and four children, have just come to California.

Miss Kate McConnell is house guest of Mrs. DeFrenn and visiting other friends in Pacific Beach.

As many of the Boy Scouts as could leave home are having a fine time in camp at Fort Rosecrans, with their scout master, Mr. Roffe.

Margaret Reed and Hobart Wallen were the two Pacific Beach graduates from the high school who were on the honor roll and are eligible for membership in the Timalathean society, the new 10-point system recently adopted at the high school in place of the former honor roll.

Pacific Beach subscribers are kindly requested to ask for their paper every Saturday at the postoffice, as copies are duly mailed to everyone and unless called for will probably remain undelivered.
